The weather was now turning colder, so Coyote and his friends headed home (which was, of course, downstream).

Around Taos they met Old Cottonwood.

He was just beginning to turn golden. Some of his leaves were letting go and fluttering to the ground.

“That looks like fun!” said Coyote. “How do you do that?”